

SUNDAY REVIVAL SERMONS DRAW GREAT AUDIENCES

Many Women Hear Dr. Chapman Sunday Afternoon—Blow at Liquor Sunday Night

PROGRAM OF WEEK FOR THE REVIVAL

Monday Afternoon—No service.

Monday Evening—Service at 7:30 o'clock.

Tuesday Afternoon at 3 o'clock, evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Wednesday—Afternoon at 3 o'clock, evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Thursday—Afternoon at 3 o'clock, evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Friday—Afternoon at 3 o'clock, evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Saturday—No service.

Dr. Chapman will deliver his evening subjects in advance this week.

His evening subjects will be:

Tuesday, "The Holy Spirit";

Wednesday, "The Endowment With Power For Service";

Thursday, "The Secret Victory Over Sin";

Friday, "The Power of a Surrendered Life".

The growing interest in the Chapman revival and the growing power of the evangelists, was demonstrated Sunday by two great meetings at the Tabernacle on Peachtree street.

In the afternoon there was a meeting for women only which filled every seat in the building and had several hundred women standing to hear the sermon, while at the night service the house again was packed to overflowing.

Dr. Chapman in his sermon Sunday struck his first blow at the liquor traffic as an incident to his main theme and thought and indicated that he will focus his attention upon the subject at a later stage of the revival.

What he said in passing was that liquor traffic is a prohibitionist issue, is really one of the most important issues of the day.

"Compromise is always a price of defeat," he said, "and the fact that we are compromising by allowing wedges to open the way for its violation is today responsible for the deplorable situation which exists."

"MORAL LEPROSY"

The sermon Sunday night was an appeal for strict standards of honesty and pure living for men and women. "Moral leprosy" was the subject.

"The world is full of moral leprosy whose disease is as unclean and as awful as the physical disease of leprosy."

"There are thousands of trained men preachers of big universities, who are moral leprosy at heart."

"You balance your books and pocket money that doesn't belong to you."

"You looked upon a woman with lust and while the blush was hot on your cheek you vowed you would never do it again, but you did. Leprosy!"

"You said beside a man who blasphemed God and cursed His church and you failed to rebuke him. Leprosy!"

"You stifled your sense of duty to your children and yourself and surrendered to the habit of drink. Leprosy!"

"True, physically, all men and women would heal you. Suppose every person in this audience who is afflicted with the hidden disease of sin should be collected to rise and say, as the physical leprosy, say 'I am healed.'"

At the close of his sermon Dr. Chapman invited an evening prayer service to lead a better life and accept Jesus Christ as their savior to come forward and shake his hand. More than one hundred people went forward, and after the hand shaking from the time they signed cards as converts and indicated the churches which they desired to join.

The purpose in limiting the afternoon service to women was to give them a chance for as many as possible. They came by the thousands, first filling the Tabernacle thirty minutes before the service opened, and packing it and standing in all the available space by the time it opened.

To this remarkable congregation Dr. Chapman preached with great power on the subject, "The Wages of Sin Is Death." He declared that sin is a woman on earth can grapple with sin and win the victory, and that sin is a woman of everything that goes to make her beautiful.

Hundreds of women; when the sermon was over, raised their hands and said, "I will be true to God and to an invitation to lead better lives."

TYE HOME ON PEACHTREE IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Walter T. Newman Residence, Adjoining, Seriously Damaged by Flames

In a $15,000 fire Monday morning at 4:30 o'clock the home of Benjamin W. Tye, 205 Peachtree street, was destroyed and the roof and south side of the adjacent residence of Walter T. Newman badly damaged. The loss is covered by insurance.

Mr. Tye, whose family is out of town, was alone in the house. Awakened by a cracking noise, he reached under his pillow for a revolver, grasped the weapon, and waited. The would-be burglar, who had entered the house through the door, was startled by the sound of the alarm.

Instead of a burglar, however, flames burst through the door. Mr. Tye leaped out of bed, the revolver still in his hand, and escaped from the house, which was burning from basement to roof. Outside he saw that the flames were threatening the adjacent home of Mr. Newman, and he returned to the house, which was now a fire trap.

The fire, in the heart of the fashionable Peachtree section, caused much excitement.

Mr. Tye is a prominent attorney of the city. He is the son of Mr. Tye, who was the head of Walter T. Newman & Co., real estate dealers.

SCHMIDT AGAIN DRAWS SENTENCE IN STOCKADE

Man of "Out-Again-In-Again" Fame Takes Bible Along—This Time

Joe Schmidt has gone to the stockade for thirty days, in his pocket a Bible which he will read in his spare moments between rock piles. In the hope that it will teach him to quit drinking.

Joe Schmidt was arrested on account of his habit of getting arrested with the regularity of an eight-day clock, had the distinction of being arrested for the first time in 1914.

In the afternoon he was in again on the same count.

"I've got me a Bible now," Joe told Recorder Johnson Monday. "It's got a verse in it about 'not upon the wine when it is red.' It's got a lot of other good things in it."

Joe said he would read it until it found instructions about cutting the booze.

THEATERS

Madame Henriette de Serria, a famous French actress, at the Academy of Sculpture, of Paris, supported by a company of fifteen professional models from that wonderful institution of art will be the star act of the bill of novelty, comedy and music to be presented this week at the busy Forsyth.

Feature that will attract a great deal will be the appearance of Alexander Scott, the musical star who has been long and successfully identified with Henry Boy George Evans' musicals.

There is no better actor in the city than Scott, and no more popular. The boys have some stunning new wardrobe and some that will surely appeal.

Bertha Creighton and company, presenting "Our Husband," an excellent comedy in one act, will be another of the features. Miss Creighton has long been a legitimate star and a success in stock, but the lure of vaudeville was too great for her to resist and vaudeville has gained another star feature.

Corelli and Gilett. "The Old Pair," the Armat Brothers, in a clown novelty, "A Woodside Inn," a novelty in song and dance, and the Skaters' Revue, in a variety of acts, will make up a bill that is going to keep the "Sold Out" sign on all the week.

Beginning with a matinee this afternoon, the Baldwin-Melville Stock company will present the story of Uncle Tom, Little Eva, Topsy and others in a play under the title of "Old Plantation Days." The play will be at the Atlanta Theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday in addition to the regular matinee on Sunday.

Day matinees will be at 3 o'clock for the school children. The play has been carefully cast and rehearsed by Walter S. Baldwin, who has given his assurance that it is not objectionable.

WRECK OF FREIGHT AT DECATUR, INVESTIGATED

Georgia Road Detectives Try to Determine if Wreckers Caused Accident

Mechanics and detectives of the Georgia railroad are conducting an investigation to determine whether the big freight wreck at Decatur was caused by the failure of the automatic switch to work properly or whether it was caused by train wreckers.

The debris was cleared from the tracks yesterday morning and the train was being again along the main line. While the wreck was being cleared away, a train derailed on a temporary track.

It required two big derricks and a small army of workmen to get the big freight train back on the track, but this was accomplished Sunday afternoon and it was taken to the roundhouse to be given a thorough overhauling.

TWO MASKED WHITE MEN ROB GROCER OF $52

While in the back yard of his grocery store at 355 Hamilton avenue Monday morning at 4:30 o'clock William P. West was robbed of $52 cash by two masked white men, armed with revolvers.

West had just opened his store and was moving the cash register, taken home Saturday night, was still in his pocket.

The two men, who were dressed in dark clothing, approached West from behind and held him at gunpoint.

West, who was alone in the store, did not resist and the men took the cash and fled.

The police are looking for the two men and have offered a reward for their capture.

The robbery occurred at a time when the store was closed and no other customers were present.

The police are investigating the case and have not yet identified the suspects.

The robbery is the latest in a series of similar crimes in the city.

The police are urging the public to provide any information that might help in the investigation.

"CAGES" FOR CONVICTS NOT SO BAD AS PAINTED

Tom Winn Says They Are "Sleeping Cars" and Points Out Their Advantages

The board of county commissioners will hold a special meeting Thursday to take final steps toward the establishment of a "cage" for convicts, according to Commissioner W. Tom Winn.

"Opponents of the plan may call them cages, if they want to," says Commissioner Winn, "but we call them sleeping cars."

Winn declares that Warden C. H. Girardeau, Eugene Prager, James Haves and others have been working on the plan for the first portable cage for several weeks, and from his description, their plans, when carried out, give convenience to the convicts which rival the conveniences of travel in a tourist sleeper.

"The camp can be moved in a day and set up," says Commissioner Winn, "so that the convicts will be able to travel on the road the following day."

"There will be two sleeping cars, cages in which will be the convicts. These cars, when stopped for the night, can be fastened together, and a little heating apparatus set up to heat both cars just as comfortably as a room can be heated. The sanitary arrangements in the cars are excellent."

A part of the camp will be a mess tent, equipped with collapsible tables, so that the dining room of the camp can be set up in a few minutes. There will be a special tent for guards and a bath tent. The camp sites will always be near through pipes and over a steam boiler to give the convicts hot and cold water for their shower baths.

The total cost of all equipment for the first portable camp, which will accommodate 26 convicts, will be $1,500.

Mr. Winn says that the first portable camp is to be an honor camp, and the 26 convicts who compose it will be carefully selected by Warden Girardeau from among the men with good records since their convictions. They will not be shackled, but, of course, will be locked in the steel "sleeping cars" at night.

NO MORE APPLICATIONS FOR CLOTHING RECEIVED

Charities Already Have More Orders Than Can Be Filled

The Associated Charities will accept no more applications for Bumble Day clothing, because already it has more applications than it can fill.

The clothing has been assorted into departments for men, women and children, and orders are being made up for families who have applied and whose need is known to be genuine.

When an order for a family has been made up, it is wrapped, tied and ready to deliver, the Associated Charities sends a postal card to the family notifying them to come and get the package.

If a family who has applied for clothing gets no notification postcard, they may know that there was not enough to supply them.

It is hard for Secretary Logan and his associates to fill some orders and leave others unfilled, but there is no enough clothing to go around, and they have done the best they could, filling those orders where the need is known to be most pressing.

Stock Yards Reopen

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 22.—The Herd's Island stock yards were reopened today after a two week quarantine because of foot and mouth disease.

The yards, which had been closed since January 10, are now open to the public.

The reopening of the yards is a relief to the stock raisers and the public.

Germany's Food Shortage.
Germany's submarine raids against the merchant ships of the Allies is avowedly in retaliation for Great Britain's interference with Germany's food imports. Great Britain justifies its course on the ground that since the German government took direct charge of food supplies throughout the empire, food imports would become the property of the government rather than of individuals, would become in effect materials of war, and as such would be subject to the enemy's seizure. Between public rations and military rations, the British argue, there can be no assured difference in a country which is in arms and which admits a shortage of food.

It seems, indeed, that when Germany adopted stringent measures to economize its dwindling stock of provisions it gave its enemy a pretext for drawing still tighter the coils of isolation. Until the government began commandeering food supplies, Great Britain allowed neutral vessels to carry grain and other stores to German ports. Then it narrowed these privileges; and now, in answer to the submarine attack, it has withdrawn them entirely and to close German ports against all commerce with the outer world.

Germany's declaration that it is driven to extraordinary measures by its need of food is not likely to avert or soften the purpose of the Allies; rather, it is likely to make them more than ever unbending. They take it as a sign, if not an admission, that the enemy is being starved toward surrender. They know that the great and valiant German army may be, it cannot continue fighting without food. In this situation, they see a peculiar advantage, as no doubt they will press to the utmost.

Think of being president of the United States and having the opportunity of seeing all these excursions.

Price fighting is not as popular as it used to be. Here we are on the eve of the heavyweight championship, and even the war is attracting more attention.

If Washington were president today, he would in many respects face about the same problems and we doubt if he could improve on the way most of them are being met.

The Aerial Cowboy.

How the world does hum! Here's news of a Montana ranch owner who has started East to buy an aeroplane for inspecting the affairs of his seventy-five-thousand-acre estate. Some ten years ago, the story says, he befriended his neighbors by getting an automobile in which to make the rounds of his great ranch. That machine enabled him to cover in a few days distances which had required a fortnight when traveled on horseback. But the roads are oftentimes bad, and he is determined to ride superior to them.

"There are no rats or mud in the sky," exclaims this progressive ranchman; "one can skin over woods, mountain peaks, gullies, washed-out bridges and whatnot; and he can do it in half a day. I'm going to buy an airplane for looking after my herds and their keepers." He will find, no doubt, that eagles are in the air as well as on earth—swirls, eddies and holes which are sometimes very treacherous; but if he learns to pilot his craft skillfully enough he can evade most of them, and certainly he can save time.

If the aeroplane is practicable for scouting great armies and ascertaining priceless military information, if it can cross seas and journey hundreds of miles through uncertain weather, it ought to be serviceable for everyday use on a ranch. The United States postoffice department is planning to use aeroplanes for carrying the mails on certain routes; and the assistant postmaster general recently predicted that a few years hence the postal aviator would excite no more wonder than does the railway mail clerk of today.

It is just as bad for the ship, but the owner always feels relieved that it was a mine and not a submarine that blew it up.

Jones and Brown, who need that bacon, goat and butter, told Smith that they were "on." It is generally conceded by literary luminaries that Thackeray has written the purest English, briefly or in sustained effort; that his "Vanity Fair" is the purest English in the language—Letter to the New York Sun.

Does Holland Hold the Key?

That ever interesting and sometimes prophetic English novelist, Mr. H. G. Wells, has undertaken to show why Holland, for her own welfare, should join the Allies and how, if she did join them, she could strike the decisive blow of the war. It is commonly agreed that the canny Dutch will not jump into the fight unless they are well assured of coming out of it with substantial gains. Both sides, no doubt, have been tugging and coaxing for the Netherlands' support; and gossip has it that months ago Germany offered enticing terms to The Hague—a strip of Belgium together with commercial and strategic advantages. But so far Holland has smoked its pipe in serene and watchful neutrality.

There is no question, however, that this sturdy little nation could wield telling influence on the fortunes of the war, particularly if it cast its lot with the Allies. Its army of three hundred and fifty thousand well armed and well drilled men would be a factor to be reckoned with, but much more important would be the value of its territory as a way of approach to German positions. Simply by opening her ports and borders to the forces of the Allies, Holland could come near breaking Germany's grip in Belgium and could expose German soil to invasion.

As Mr. Wells argues, British warships could enter the West Schelde and troops could be landed at Zeeland or Rotterdam. In such circumstances, the Germans would be hard pressed to hold Antwerp and Brussels. Another observer says in this connection:

"While it may be assumed that the Germans would throw an army across the frontier as soon as hostilities became inevitable, it would have to reckon with the compact and effective Dutch army, which might be expected to hold Dutch army units re-converted by troops of the Allies. It must be considered that both Great Britain and France are now ready with troops for a campaign in German territory by way of Holland. While a strong British fleet watched the mouth of the Elbe for a sally by the German dreadnoughts, a Franco-British squadron could cover the landing of troops in Holland. Use would be made at once of Dutch waters from the Hook of Holland south for torpedo boat and submarine bases, and an enormous naval advantage would be gained over Germany. A campaign by the Allies in Dutch-German territory, if pushed with skill and vigor would compel the retirement of the German army from Flanders and might be decisive of the war. In the early days of the great conflict when the Allies were being driven back on Paris and the Germans were carrying everything before them in the theaters of war, a pretext to invade Holland would have been welcomed with grim satisfaction; but conditions have undergone such a grave change that her neutrality is now vital."

No wonder Holland's sharp protest against threatened dangers to its shipping from Germany's undersea war around the British Isles struck deep into the thought of the Government at Berlin. Dutch vessels, no doubt, will be treated with all possible consideration. The British have been scrupulous to give no offense to the Netherlands; the Germans will be equally so. It would seem, then, that there is scant likelihood of Holland being pulled into the war. Yet, standing as she does, continuously in the shadow and smoke of the vast conflict, her position is extremely trying. "Her nerves are on edge," Mr. Herbert Grey expresses it; and he adds that while Holland's court circles and aristocracy are pro-German, the rank and file, including the men of the army, are strongly pro-Allies. And it is by the rank and file rather than by the court or the aristocracy that Holland is governed and its policies determined.

Destroying and Saving.

This is the first great war, it is said, in which fewer soldiers are killed by disease than by bullets—a particularly striking fact when one considers the sweep of the campaigns and the terrible intensity of the fighting incidents.

The same forces of science that have sharpened and multiplied the instruments of destruction have brought forth new means of protection and healing. The sanitary and surgical equipment of the modern army is as wonderful, indeed more wonderful, than its rifles and machine guns. The percentage of men who recover from wounds is far higher than in great wars of the past, and the number who escape diseases incident to exposure and hardship and unhealthy surroundings is remarkable.

Editorial Echoes

Three acquaintances who have reached the middle state of maturity and yet are dubious of their own capacity to read and write have requested that I ask you to settle a heated triangle of debate. Jones, of Suffolk, bet a Virginia cured, western rabbit on the fact that the "Vanity Fair" is written in purer English than Br'er Goldenrod's "Vicar of Wakefield." Brown, of Norfolk, bet a Nansemond river shad and a Dismal Swamp deer that Br'er Goldenrod put it all over Br'er Thackeray when it came to the pure English style. Smith, of Chockituck, bet a side of bacon, a Shenandoah valley goat and half a acre of the Smithfield flats that getting down to pure English as it is written Br'er Thackeray in his "Vanity Fair" holds all records against the field of ancient and modern writers.

Jones and Brown, who need that bacon, goat and goat butter, told Smith that they were "on." It is generally conceded by literary luminaries that Thackeray has written the purest English, briefly or in sustained effort; that his "Vanity Fair" is the purest English in the language—Letter to the New York Sun.

Have you guessed the love that's made
In the fairy, witching shade
Of the forests found along this royal road?
When life was filled with bliss,
All because of just one kiss;
And the heart was swelling with its loving load!
Have you thought of hearts that ache,
And souls that writhe and ache,
As they travel on this lone and lonely way?
For them naught but pain ahead;
All their hopes and joys are dead;
And they drag on through the dreary, dismal day!
But the ROAD is still the same.
Be the passing PAIN or Shame?
With its freight of joy or sorrow—mighty load:
And we love it for its worth,
For its sorrow and its might.
This rich, rare, royal, Roswell Road!

The Journal's Letter Box

(The Journal welcomes short letters on reasonable subjects; but long epistles are a trespass on the Journal's space and all anonymous communications are published.)

Editor of the Journal:
We do not believe music is wicked; and we believe the laborer is worthy of his hire; consequently we can see no reason for forbidding the giving of good concerts and charging admission for same on Sunday afternoons. The subject of Sunday amusement of wholesome kind has been repeatedly discussed publicly in this city many times, but unfortunately we are no nearer a solution of the problem than at any time previous to now. The clause in the interpretation of the law which has permitted the moving pictures to open on Sundays for various benefits has, it seems, been more or less taken advantage of, and it is possible that unless this permission will be withheld in the future.

Under the present conditions the organ concerts at the auditorium furnish educational advantages as well as entertaining qualities with a musician such as Mr. Kraft in charge supported by the Atlanta Musical Public Association. The attendance upon these recitals every Sunday afternoon proves the need and also the usefulness and effectiveness of the effort to supply a quiet, wholesome, educational, and even religious form of entertainment upon the Lord's Day. Thousands of people are enabled to better forgo the opportunity of listening to these concerts. There is a greater part of every church service which makes use of music's power for uplift, and without such a condition perhaps the devotional services would be less effective if not less interesting. We therefore cannot argue that music is wicked. The fact that so-called music is used to induce a crowd to the concert hall is a different matter. Good music is as elevating in the concert hall as it is in the church, and furthermore the best music exists in concert form. We do not mean best from a purely technical standpoint, but best from the point of elevating influence. This fact is due to the church's accustomed use of musical forms, and the traditional ideas of the hymn meter, the anthem's single mode, etc. If we go back far enough, and also in principal centers today, we find the entire orchestra, with drums and tympani, trombones, and all the rest in the church; and even the conductor with his baton was not considered a wicked person. The church has a proven man, John Sebastian Bach, whose great portion of his life as the cantor-composer of St. Thomas church, in Leipzig, with the entire symphony orchestra to give his musical services, with choir and soloists. To "make a joyful noise unto the Lord" is not wicked. A properly conducted symphony concert on Sunday is not wicked, for the greatest pleasure is in the multi-colored tones of the orchestra, and godly men and women have composed their greatest works in orchestral form. Godly men, women and children have listened to orchestral concerts on Sundays as well as week days, and have received inestimable good thereby.

In these days of enlightenment, when we are willing to forgive the fallen, instead of counting them forever outcasts, let us primarily place an influence for good in the way of the unemployed, uncultured, and otherwise dissipated Sunday-seekers for amusement. Nothing better could serve the purpose than concert.

Musicians make their living by their art, as do doctors, lawyers, and the great majority of professions. The doctors make visits on Sunday, receiving a fee; the minister's principal workday is the Sabbath, for it is in his duty as the pastor of the church to keep his flock on Sunday, so does the street car company, the soda fountain keeper, and the cigar man. Then why is it wicked (to say the least) for him to work on the Sabbath? This is the point which stands between Sunday amusement-seekers and Sunday concerts.

But for the condition Atlanta would be enjoying a symphony orchestra concert every Sunday afternoon, as well as a concert given for the greatest pleasure of the community. For some reason, not quite evident to the general public, the managerial forces of things musical in the city refuse to allow the orchestra for the preparation of inward development, in which they get together substantially during the one week of opera in the spring annually, and the surplus of the orchestra fund, in past seasons, was used for the city weekly symphony concerts for a season of seven or eight months. Why not have both? Sunday is the only day upon which the great majority of the orchestra players are available. That is the day upon which the entertainment is needed. It is not get together?

"Vell, vare een 'Vanke Doodie'! I don't know him, but he would make a fine 'Vanke Doodie'!"
"And then there was more trouble. One of these five great men had carried to Europe a fine wine book in his wallow tail coat pocket. At that moment the music of the 'Vanke Doodie' to mingle its harmonies with those of 'Live the King,' and thus bring together in perpetual peace the two warring nations."

The bandmaster suggested that if the gentlemen could not produce the music, they could sing it for him. "Vell, vare een 'Vanke Doodie'!"

DIANA DILLPICKLES IN

A 4-REEL "SCREECHER" FILM

"DIANA SAYS THAT EITHER THIS PICTURE OF UNCLE ZEE GOES OR SHE GOES. IT IS KIND OF PLAIN, I ADMIT, WHAT IT NEEDS IS TO BE GOT UP ARTISTIC WITH YOUNGERS."

"MA, HAVE YOU AN EXTRA (LARGE SHEET YOU CAN LEND ME?"

"WHERE IS THAT LITTLE BOY, THEY THREW ALL THE ENLARGED CRAYON PORTRAITS AND SO FORTH?"

Light BY GRANTLAND RICE

When Denton Tecumseh Young, familiarly known in intimate baseball circles as Cy, won his 55th major league victory and shortly afterward retired from the game, the opinion was freely offered that he had set a pitching mark for all time.

"Over 500 big league victories in the box—it will never be touched," was the comment of the time. And perhaps the comment was properly conceived.

YOUNG A MARVEL

Old Cy was undoubtedly a pitching marvel. To begin with he lasted 22 years as a big league pitcher. He won 291 games in the National League and 217 in the American.

After pitching 16 years he had had seasons in 1905 and 1906, and every one set him down as being through—a grand old veteran and such, but a member of the Has Beens at last, and in 1907, his nineteenth season, he jumped to another good year, and in 1908, his twentieth campaign, he did even better, with 21 victories and 11 defeats for an average of .656. And he was 42 years old when he established this mark.

HIS SOLE RIVAL

There is still one man in baseball with a chance to equal or to Young's mark. The name is Mathewson, the premier of the Giants.

Mathy has served 15 campaigns in the big league, counting 1900 when he worked three games and lost them all. This is his sixteenth year, and he is 35 years old. If he can last more seasons he will equal Young's 22-year stand and still retire from the game two years younger than Cy was when he ceased firing at the old plate. So it isn't impossible. For Mathy is also a big man physically, with a world of vitality and a canny brain that understands how to protect an arm and conserve pitching resources.

MATTY'S MARK

So far Mathewson has won 352 ball games with the Giants, his only home under the Big Tent. This record should count as 14 years' work, as Mathewson only worked three games in 1900 without achieving a victory. To show how closely the two have traveled, Young the end of 14 years had won 354 games, just two beyond the Giant star's present total.

To equal Young's record Mathewson now has 156 victories to accumulate. This means that he must pitch in active harness at least six more seasons and be able to average 25 conquests a year through this length of time. It means that he must pitch at the same average for six more seasons—the same average he has maintained since he joined the Giants.

HIS CHANCE

Just what chance Matty has of plugging along six or seven more seasons is beyond any guess.

He is now in fine condition and apparently far from being all in. He has taken wonderful care of himself in every way and has developed the rare knack in the game of saving his arm and drifting easily when not under pressure.

But after 22 there is no way of forecasting the date when something will suddenly give way and the old stuff will be only a memory. It is easy enough to say that Matty will be a great pitcher as long as he can get a ball up to the plate, only he isn't so. He will be a great pitcher as long as he can get the ball up with enough stuff to puzzle the batsman. After that he will not be a great pitcher any longer.

HIS LAST YEAR

Matty is supposed to have drawn a bad year last season, but it was only a bad finish after his mates had faded out and hit the chutes. At one stage of the battling he had won 16 games and lost only 4. He finished with 24 victories against 13 defeats, a percentage of .650—his lowest mark since 1906. But when his mates were out hustling and playing a bit of baseball he looked as good as at any stage of his career. For over two months he boomed along at an 800 jaunt. Then the Giants buckled up like a chess ship struck by a torpedo and Matty nipped nine of his last seventeen starts.

FOR 1915.

"No pitcher in the game is in better condition than Matty is now. Through October and November he played good three days a week, leaving the others. He seemed off his hinges in mid-January to keep from getting overtrained and then left for Cuba, where he had away 36 holes a day for the last month.

At Martin it will be merely a matter of working out his arm, and what Matty doesn't know about unfolding the old wile can be told in a brace of syllables.

MATTY VS. YOUNG.

Matty, like Young, is not only physically built for a long jaunt, but he has the same even temperament. Worry is no part of his system. Last summer when the Giants were skidding and Boston was just jumping to the front, Mathewson failed to indulge in the pessimism which struck the rest of the bunch. He had the proper philosophy to back up the occasion.

"We've had our share," he said, "and it will be a good thing for baseball if Boston wins. It's hard as I ever did because I can still see that $3,000 extra we'll get in the world's series, because I'd far rather win than lose and because I'd like to see Mac get the four straight pennants. But I don't want to fall to see any reason for committing suicide. There will be other seasons and other pennants."

So here is a pitcher at 35 who looks as young as he did at 25—and who is traveling still at the same clip. A pitcher with a fine physique, a fine temperament, a fine brain and a clean mode of living. Certainly if any man in the game is to beat Young's great record, Mathewson is the man. And while he may not have an even chance to last six or seven years longer as a pitcher of first rank, he has "fighting chances" on through a laurel crowned conclusion.

Rooky Herzog Never Had Need For Nerve Tonic

Present Leader of Cincinnati Reds Told Mathewson How to Pitch the First Day He Joined the Giants—High-Strung and Nervous, and Full of Confidence

BY WYOM A. FULLERTON.

Charlie Herzog is a type of manager whose rise to baseball and his success or failure as a leader is awaited with interest by the students of the game. One "buck" is one of the most misunderstood of players because his character as seen from the stands is totally different from what he is as a man.

Herzog is a university man, a student, a lover of home life, of study. While on the field he has been the leader of the "fresh" type of player, a fighter, and a man whose ideas and theories, I consider him the best equipped education and alertness of brain of all the major league leaders. Add to this a touch of McGraw's brain, a dash of McGraw's nerve, and a willingness to mix it with anyone, and you have some conception of the young fellow to whom the task of raising the lowly Reds into respectability has been awarded.

Herzog's family was German Swiss, despite the better among fans he has no Jewish blood, although he says he is Jewish. He attended the University of Maryland. He attended the University of Maryland. He attended the University of Maryland.

His playing in the world's series against Boston was the most sensational ever seen in such a series, and he alone kept the Red Sox from winning four straight, and almost won the series for the first time.

Probably the breach would have closed had not McGraw encountered a "temporal" played in Shaver. This young wonder insisted upon a contract that he would not be traded, and McGraw, in his mind, and he was a failure. He wanted to put him in the outfield, and Shaver refused, saying it would hurt his friend, Snodgrass, a job. Just then Herzog got hurt, McGraw snatched Shaver to third, and he developed at once into a great player. Then Herzog got hurt, McGraw snatched Shaver to third, and he developed at once into a great player.

Local Catchers Ready to Sign

The unsigned members of the Cracker outfit for the 1915 season are not exactly burdening the mails with any rush of correspondence to the local baseball association just now. But there have been several days since an agreement has been received by B. Smith & Co. to have, within the past day or two, to look out for a cheering nature has been received.

Late Saturday afternoon Joe Jenkins, local catcher, was called by the Cracker outfit for the 1915 season. He was practically ready to sign up. Jenkins is at present in California, and had been insisting on a good deal steeper pay envelope than the locals could afford to give. Up to within a short time ago, however, in his latest he stated that he was up to the local catchers and indications are that he will sign up in his agreement within a short time.

Bill Hunter, another catcher, and a running mate of Jenkins on the Cracker team, has also written in stating that he would sign up to the handworn shortly. Hunter writes a very nice letter, stating that he is pleased with the berth which Manager Riney has chosen for him, and expects to have a good season this year. He and Jenkins are counted on to do the catching for the Cracker. Both are strapping youngsters who can work every day if necessary, and with them in line Manager Smith will spend but little time worrying over the receiving work for his team.

Pres. Kavanaugh of Sou. League Dies Suddenly

Head of Circuit Since 1903 Succumbs to Attack of Acute Indigestion—Capt. W. T. Crawford of Shreveport Considered Likely Successor

Baseball fans throughout the south were shocked to learn of the sudden death of President W. M. Kavanaugh, of the Southern League, which occurred Sunday afternoon at his home in Little Rock. President Kavanaugh had been in apparent good health up to within a short time before he died, death resulting from an attack of acute indigestion.

President Kavanaugh had been at the head of the Southern League since 1903, when he succeeded J. B. Nicklin, of Chattanooga. During his tenure of office, the league has developed from a new and practically untapped proposition to one of the leading minor organizations of the country. Much of the progress made by the circuit has been due to the efficient manner in which the late president handled its affairs.

As president of the league, Judge Kavanaugh was also a member of the executive board of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs. No man in minor league ranks wielded a greater influence with the highest powers of the organization than did the Southern league head. He carried the distinction of never having lost one of his rulings reversed by the national board. Furthermore he never lost an important fight before the board for any proposition that he was fostering in the relations between major and minor leagues.

Not only the Southern League, but organized baseball in general has lost a very valuable servant in the death of Judge Kavanaugh. With real activities in baseball rank 20 years at hand, it will be necessary that a successor to the Arkansas giant be chosen at an early date. Just who will be chosen for the job is as yet mere speculation.

Jack Johnson Reaches Havana Nunnally First In Medal Match

HAVANA, Feb. 22—Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, accompanied by his trainer, arrived here today from Chicago. He appeared in good condition and said he was in time for his match with Jess Willard, on March 6.

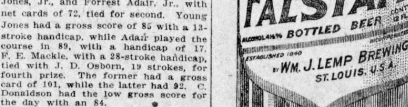

Johnson declared he was determined to push ahead in spite of chaotic conditions. He said that he had been leaving for Tampico, however, he might give an exhibition bout here with Sam McVey or Jim Johnson.

The Johnson sent from Barbados February with training staff, the schooner Henry Kruger. It was reported last week that the schooner had been seized by the Cuban government. An El Paso dispatch said, too, that Johnson would be in the contest at Havana, Mexico, within a few hours' ride of Mexico. This seems to have been an error.

ALLIES NOT DETERMINED ON RETALIATION PLANS

Asquith Says Germany's New
Naval Policy Will Be Met
Speedily.

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The allies have not yet decided on the precise method of retaliation to be pursued against Germany's new naval policy, but a speedy agreement is expected. Premier Asquith, speaking in the house of commons today, said:

"The allies governments are considering what action it would be proper to take in the way of reprisals against the German policy of attacking and destroying British allied and neutral merchant vessels, without warning, and without an attempt being made to save the lives of civilians and innocent crew."

"Pending a decision, which I hope will very soon be announced, I cannot make a statement regarding the nature and scope of the measures to be taken."

As to the form in which the decision will be published the premier said: "There certainly will be a note from Great Britain and I hope there will be a joint one."

Russians Explain Retreat From East Prussia Front

(By Associated Press.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 22.—Explanation of the Russian retreat from east Prussia is contained in a communication given out by the general staff.

Successes of the German coup attributed to the Russian retreat to strategic railways which prevented the Russians from concentrating "with necessary rapidity" our east Prussian front forces indispensable to ward off the attack of the German army.

The general staff asserts that the massing of German troops in east Prussia was revealed to the Russians on February 4 but that the magnitude of the concentration did not become known until several days later. Because of these conditions, it is stated, withdrawal of the Russian army from east Prussia towards the frontier was decided upon. This withdrawal was followed by a further retirement towards the Niemen and the Bzura rivers. The communication follows:

"The Germans, after a series of extremely successful and energetic attacks which cost them immense numbers of troops, became persuaded of the impossibility of dislodging us from the bank of the Vistula and proceeded at the end of January to put a new plan into operation."

"Having finished the formation in the interior of their country of several new corps and deciding to continue the transportation of their troops from the front in order to make a supreme effort against us, profiting by their network of railways, the Germans were enabled to launch an overwhelming force against our front, which was occupied strongly organized positions along the Angerap river and the Masurian lakes."

"The result of this coup of this coup the Germans transported also part of their troops from the front to the Bzura, the Bzura and the right bank of the Vistula. This gathering of German troops in east Prussia was revealed to us on February 4, but the magnitude of the concentration did not become known until several days later."

"Not being able, through lack of railroad facilities, to concentrate on our front, the Russian army was forced to withdraw the above mentioned army from east Prussia towards the frontier and further retirement towards the Niemen and the Bzura rivers."

"The right wing of the tenth army, pressed by great numbers of enemy troops and threatened with being surrounded on the right flank, was compelled to make a very swift turning movement in the direction of Kovno."

"This maneuver exposed the flank of the corps following, which found itself in an extremely dangerous position. The enemy advanced in several places, but was repulsed in all of them."

"Other corps of the tenth army, halting continuously and stubbornly, slowly retreated in the direction marked out by their commanders. On taking up these positions the Russian troops bravely repulsed their attacks, inflicting upon them severe losses, and overcoming incredible difficulties caused by the enemy's fire."

"Retreating step by step, one corps, forming the left wing of the tenth army, held the enemy for nine days on lines which gradually were traversed in four days."

"On February 19 these corps fell back through Augustowo, retired from the battle at Spicz, and assumed the new positions indicated for them."

"On the right bank of the Vistula, on the road from Plosta, Austrian detachments have been relieved by German troops."

MAYO MAY BE POLICE CHIEF IF BEAVERS GOES

(By Associated Press.)

Even though the members of the police board who are opposed to Chief Beavers succeed in ousting him from the head of Atlanta's police department, the board will not, in the opinion of one of the most active of its members, go outside of the police force to get a new chief.

"Should the board decide to displace Chief Beavers," said this member, who asked for his name withheld, "it will, I am sure, select some other member of the force to succeed him. In such an event, I believe, the board would select Captain W. M. Mayo, who has been connected with the department for years and who has a fine record, both as an officer and as an executive."

This member said that when Chief Beavers eliminated Captain Mayo would have seven votes in the board and that he felt certain the elections of new board members by council next Monday would increase Mayo's strength.

WRIGHT NOT IN CONTROL OF EMPIRE LIFE'S AFFAIRS

(By Associated Press.)

Order of Judge Hammond, of Augusta, Set Aside by Judge Pendleton

Judge Pendleton, of the superior court, Monday issued an order which in effect removed Insurance Commissioner W. A. Wright from full control of the affairs of the Empire Life Insurance company.

Judge Pendleton held that the company had removed its headquarters to Augusta, and that Judge Hammond, of Augusta, had no jurisdiction in the order placing Commissioner Wright in charge, had no jurisdiction on this account.

A bill of exceptions was filed by Attorney General Warren Grice, and an appeal was taken to the supreme court. He contended that the company, by deposing itself in Richmond county, admitted its headquarters were there. Judge Pendleton's order was issued on the hearing of an application for a writ of prohibition against Commissioner Wright and applied for by A. J. Smith, a special agent of the company, and its creditor for salary and commissions. He sought to have Commissioner Wright removed from continuing under the order issued at Augusta. Young B. Fraud in Its Procurement, Says Attorney P. C. McDuffie's Statement

The following statement was issued today by Attorney P. C. McDuffie in response to the position of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company, in which company A. D. Oliver, of Leesburg, is said to be insured for $25,000.

"No valid policy was ever issued by the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company on the life of Mr. Oliver, and at the proper time steps will be taken to have the policy cancelled, which policy I understand is held by one of the parties suspected of being implicated in the crime, and who are now under arrest. The grounds for such action will be gross misrepresentations and fraud in the procurement of the policy."

The felonious conduct of other parties may be an issue in the case, but it is not at the present time prepared to discuss that phase of the question. Any sane man familiar with the facts in this case would not contend that a valid policy was ever issued."

New Industrial Subdivision Is Opened at Whitehall Street and Stewart Avenue—Several New Business Leases Are Scheduled for Announcement During the Week—Bank Clearing Comparison Reflects Easier Money Conditions

K. G. Withingham's Sons, lumber dealers, have opened an industrial subdivision of their property at No. 549 Whitehall street, at Stewart Avenue and the Southern railway.

They have opened a street from Whitehall through the center of the property, so that each lot can face this street and the railroad in the rear.

The subdivision will make sixty-eight 25-foot lots, and Atlanta & Wiggins are in charge of the project.

RENTING AND LEASING

Several more important business leases will be announced during the week, including stores at large rentals. There has been quite a perceptible increase in activity of business leases lately.

The house-renting business is in even keel. One of the agencies shown by its books that three times as many houses were rented last week as during the week before.

While this may be an exceptional rate, it is not unusual for the agencies now report an excess of rented houses over those going vacant. This is a direct result of the condition prevailing a short time back.

GENERAL CONDITION.

Better money conditions are also reflected not only in the number of loans agents now in the market, but also in the comparison of bank clearings last week.

The latter showed a decrease of only 3 per cent as compared with the corresponding week last year.

There has been steady routine up to this rate the deficit should soon be wiped out and an increase suggested.
